Discussion was initiated by the Department of Sanskrit by raising the following issues through PPT- ‘Western 30 article’ of human rights stand in between marketing of weapons along with ammunition and hospitals and it will be interesting to evaluate Human Rights in the context of 1. Darwinian survival of the fittest, 2. Freudian Sex, 3. Marxism- so the question is- are these human rights really meant to serve humanity or to uphold human dignity or human wellbeing?? Are you sure they are not tools to serve businessmen or marketing interests? So, on this Human Rights Day, let us evaluate these 30 articles of human rights, their background, intentions etc from our own indigenous agrarian culture, manifested in Sanskrit Shastras- पुमान् पुमांसं परिपातु विश्वतः (ऋग्वेद). Let every man protect another man. Key Points: 1. Do Indian educators and intellectuals use any terms or concepts connected to human rights that are appropriate for their context and reality? 2. Has India ever experienced a fact, event, or circumstance relating to human rights that we can confidently and fearlessly communicate to the international community? 3. Does the Indian education system contribute to the development of a human rights culture at any level? 4. From today's schooling, what kind of human personality do we anticipate? 5. What has Indian intellectualism contributed to the global discussion on human rights?

This was followed by open house discussion in which Dr R K Gupta, Dr Vinay Singhal, Dr Anand K Gurhye, Dr Rajendra, Dr C K Jha, Dr Minty, Dr Ritu Talwar, Dr Anubha Jain, Dr Avinash K Shrivastava and others shared their critical comments. In his Presidential Remarks, Dr. Mahesh Kaul, Post-Doctoral ICPR Fellow, New Delhi shared his views on Indian traditional ethos of human rights and provided historical resources and references. It was concluded that there is difference between western and Indian approach to human rights and in India we need to follow our own cultural values of human rights and challenge western human rights emerged out of sickening violence committed by western countries collectively and they still are doing this. Webinar concluded with vote of thanks.
