Report: Online FDP on
'Quality Research in Higher Education: Ethics &
Institutional Support'
(July 27-28, 2020)

The inauguration session of the two-day online Faculty Development Program on 'Quality Research in Higher Education: Ethics and Institutional Support', organized by IQAC & NAAC Coordination Committee was very impressive and informative. The program of the first day was presided over by the Dr. Bhagwan Singh, Registrar, Kurukshetra University, Kurukshetra. The key-note address was delivered by Dr. Manoj Joshi [Contact No.- 9896074859], Librarian & Head, Department of Information and Library Science, Kurukshetra University, Kurukshetra. Dr. Rajbir Parashar, Coordinator, NAAC Coordination Committee, first introduced the title and objectives of the program to the participants and circulated it for discussion. With a welcome speech, Principal Dr. Sanjay Goyal hoped that this effort would be effective in reaching some specific conclusions along with discussion about qualitative research and in its various dimensions of ethics and policy. Dr. Seema Gupta, Coordinator, IQAC gave a brief introduction of the chief guests.

The Keynote speaker, Dr. Manoj Joshi emphasized the importance of ethics and its implementation in qualitative research. He called it a kind of religion. He described the moral and scientific duties as the most essential for the researcher. According to him, research is the only way to discover the truth about an issue, so all established rules, policies, and methods must be followed in a neutral and scientific manner. He stated that if the researcher does not follow these guidelines, the obtained conclusions will fail to meet the study objectives. In his speech of about two hours, he used PPT. A thorough analysis of research, its types, process, ethics and morality in it, the issue of plagiarism, methods to check it, and efforts made to prevent it in the educational field were presented with the aid of research. In his presidential speech, Dr. Bhagwan Singh characterized qualitative research as a critical need of the hour, emphasizing the importance of policy studies as well as institutional support and assistance. He congratulated the Principal, Managing Committee, and Program Committee for organizing such a timely occasion. The program was conducted and coordinated by Dr. Shilpy Aggarwal. The question and answer session was conducted by Dr. Surender Singh. Dr. Naresh, Librarian read the vote of thanks.

Dr. R.K. Uppal [Contact No.- 9478909640], Associate Professor of Economics at D.A. V. College, Malout (Punjab) was the key-note speaker for the second and final day. The program started with Dr. Suruchi Sharma administering oath to the participants on 'World Nature Conservation Day'. On this occasion, a brief documentary on environmental protection was also shown. The chief guest, Dr. Uppal was then formally introduced by Dr. Seema Gupta, Convener IQAC. Dr. R.K. Uppal shed insight on the subject of 'Research Projects: Preparation and Institutional Support'. In his statement, he described the creation of a research project as very necessary for qualitative research. It will not only implement the research plan properly, but also make resources available financially. Many government and non-government institutions are providing grants of lakhs of rupees for qualitative research. He explained the details, methods and technical form of its construction in the form of PPT. Along with discussing the grant-giving institutions at the national and international level, he also mentioned the preparation to be done to receive them. In his declaration, he stressed how important it is for qualitative research to develop a study project. Grants for qualitative research comprising lakhs of rupees are provided by numerous government and non-government organizations. Only when the researcher conducts project-level study he/she will be able to accomplish this. In a PowerPoint presentation, he provided specifics, procedures, and the technological framework for how it was built. He talked about the national and international grant-making organizations as well as the preparation needed to accept them.

In his closing remarks, Principal Dr. Sanjay Goyal emphasized the importance of research projects, saying that they will not only be beneficial to the scholar but also to the institution's future plans. He gave the organization's willingness to collaborate in all ways as an assurance of institutional cooperation. He also talked about making research assistant available to the researchers. The Keynote speaker addressed all the queries and doubts raised by Dr. R. K. Gupta, Dr. Vikas Bhardwaj and Dr. Virender Goyal, as well of around fifteen other participants. Dr. Rajbir Parashar, Convener, NAAC Coordination Committee delivered the vote of thanks. He also thanked all the participants, guests and all the members of the organizing committee and the media. More than 1000 participants got registered for this event, and it was conducted on Google Meet and Facebook Live.
